AI VISIBILITY

How much of it can anyone actually control?

I went looking for data, not opinions. Here's what I found.

Swipe →

SAME PROMPT, RUN AGAIN

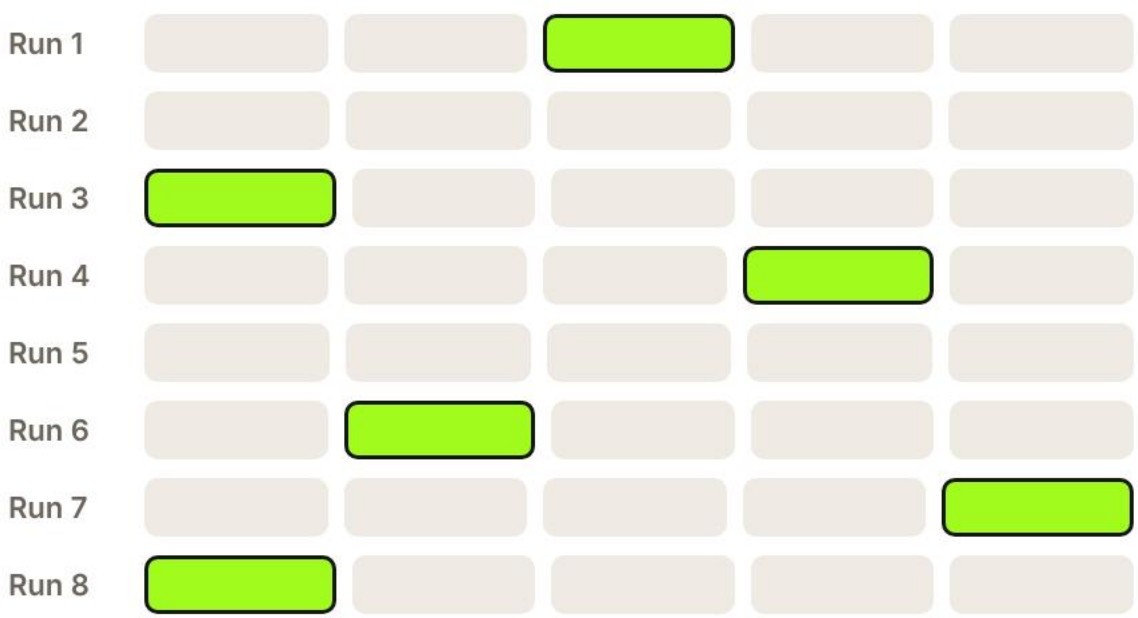

<1 in 100

chance that ChatGPT or Google's AI returned the same brand list twice, across nearly 3,000 runs of 12 prompts.

Source: SparkToro × Gumshoe study, via Search Engine Journal. Not peer-reviewed; done together with an AI tracking company.

What stayed stable: how often a brand shows up

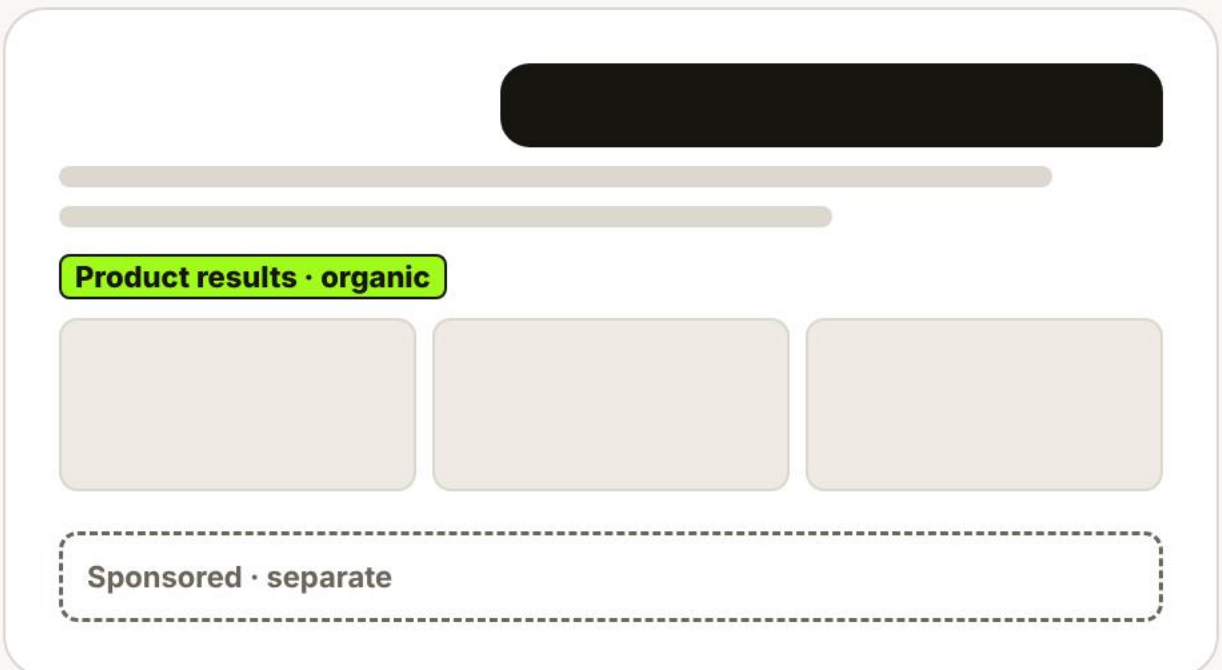

So I don't promise anyone a spot in an answer. I measure how often a brand appears across a set of real prompts, before and after the work.

Illustration, not real data

Ads are separate. Organic isn't for sale.

ChatGPT has had ads since February 2026 (Free and Go users, starting in the US). OpenAI says its product results are kept separate and aren't paid placements.

On Shopify, you're already connected

Product data reaches ChatGPT through Shopify Catalog, with no extra setup. What matters is the quality of that data.

THE SUPPLEMENT QUESTION

Health topics were excluded from the ad test. Do supplements count?

I don't know yet. If they do, there may be no paid shortcut for supplement brands, and the organic side is all there is.

Sources are linked in the post.